"The Game," A Winning Play

One can't help but boost "The Game," after one sees the play. Jack London never wrote anything more vivid, and Mr. Albert Taylor and his company, who presented the play at the Crawford last night, never appeared in a better one, at least not since they have been in El Paso.

The presentation of "The Game" last night was the first time it was ever played by Mr. Taylor and his company, in fact it was the first time the play was ever given in the United States at popular prices, and for nearly three hours it held the audience just as spell-bound as it did the first night of the year's run it had in New York City.

"The Game," like most of London's works, is a transcript from real life; it runs the gamut of human emotions, for it shows life as it is—not as it should be—and in so doing necessarily shows all phases, ignoble as well as noble. It is a queer mixture of comedy and pathos, laughter and tears—but so is life. In each of the three scenes there is a strong climax, a little pathos, lots of love, and enough laughs to actually delay the progress of the play.

To detail the story would be to spoil "The Game." Briefly, it is a story of love and politics, as shown in the life of Tim Mayo, a Nevada millionaire; of his struggle to reach the senate and of the women, both good and bad, who come into his life. The road to the senate is a rocky one, even though he has paved it with gold, but in the end he wins, as he deserves to; the villain is foiled, virtue triumphs and true love is rewarded—and the very fact that this isn't always the case in real life makes it imperative that a play which leaves one feeling good should end thus.

Like all of London's writings, "The Game" sparkles with epigrams like a stage diamond with all the footlights on. Some sting like a lash, but most of them have a big laugh tied to the end. Not many comedians can play a heavy part, but in the leading role Mr. Albert Taylor shows his versatility as an actor, for it is one that leads him into many dramatic situations. Like his clothes, Mr. Leonard Andrews, as the prize-fighter, is "the loud noise" of the show. He must be the advance agent for next season's slang, for he hands out the classic assortment ever heard in El Paso, not excluding Push Miller in "Checkers." Miss Melba Palmer, the leading lady, portrays the role of Kate Desmond in a most pleasing and convincing manner; Miss Edna Sevier is dainty and lovable as the daughter of Tim Mayo and Miss Dot Karroll was excellent as the fallen wife of millionaire Mayo, a role which calls for a great deal of emotional power.

Altogether, "The Game" is decidedly the best play ever seen in the Crawford theatre. It will be presented again tonight and tomorrow night, with a ten and twenty cent matinee at three o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Seats Tomorrow For Creator's Band

Seats for the two performances of Creator's Band, which will be at the El Paso theatre Thursday afternoon and night, will go on sale tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock at the office of the Crawford theatre. This promises to be the musical treat of the season. It will appeal to all classes, as the regular numbers will be classical and the encores popular airs. Considering the high class attraction, the prices are remarkably low, ranging from 50 cents to $1.00 for the matinee and 50 cents to $1.50 for the night performance.

In speaking of Creator's Band the Chicago Tribune recently said: "Take the fiery Italian musical temperament and intensify it until it becomes an electric battery, and the product in human form will be Creator. The audience that crowded the Studebaker yesterday afternoon and evening, when he and his band gave their concert, had their nerves twitched and tingled as if they were in connection with a battery. It is claimed that Creator hypnotizes both his hand and his hearers. There is no going to sleep, no gasping when he is at the desk. He grips you and holds you, and when he lets you wonder whether you've had a good time or not; and after you have concluded that you have, and want some more of it, you begin to marvel at his endurance. Tone is the wireless medium he uses to reach you, but the current he sends out to you is his own intense individuality, and you feel it and obey it just as unresistingly as you feel the men."

Creator's movements are so quick as to be indescribable. Every phrase in the music he not only indicates to his players, he impersonates it for them. It is music-making entirely apart from anything encountered before, and it is doubtful if its like will be met again. It can be compared to nothing, for it is personality in music raised to the ninth power, and the personality is unique.

There is about all that Creator does a sincerity and earnestness that disarm criticism. It is so clearly an expression of personal musical conviction that it stands in a class by itself, and has to be no judged. There is never for an instant any suggestion of pose about him. The whole being of the man is engrossed in his work. When Creator stands over his band they do things almost incredible. He took the close of the "William Tell" overture last evening at a speed that literally made one dizzy. It seemed impossible at first that the band could get through it at such a tempo, but it did, and the effect was truly tremendous.

Refuse To Divulge Secret

Mrs. Pruitt Attributes Her Suffering in Later Life to the Fact That She Kept Her Condition Secret When a Young Girl.

Hickory Grove, S. C.—"I was in bad health before I married," writes Mrs. Mary Pruitt, of this place, "but kept it a secret, as most young girls do. I am sure if I had taken Cardui, the woman's tonic, when I was young, I would not have gone through seven years of suffering.

Soon after I was married, the trouble became so severe, I was forced to seek relief. I tried every doctor I saw, and five different doctors in one town. They claimed they could cure me, but all failed, and we decided that I would never be well. I had such aching and drawing pains in my back, legs, sides and head, that I would cry and scream, and tell my husband that I was going to die.

Finally, one day, he read in the Ladies' Birthday Almanac about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and got a bottle for me. After taking the first dose, I felt better, and after using one bottle I never did have any more pain.

I relieved me at once.

I can never praise Cardui enough." Cardui has been found to relieve women's pains and strengthen women's weakness.

It has stood the test of time. Try it. N. B.—Write to: Ladies' Advisory Dept., Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., for Special Instructions, and a free book, "Home Treatment for Women," sent in plain wrapper, on request.
